President's Ponderings

Thank you all for your help and support regarding the exciting up-coming show. I think you will all agree that Dan is doing a great job organising it.

He still needs volunteers please, this is a big event and we need as many hands as we possibly can. If you can spare some time on the Friday to help set up, during the event on Saturday and/or Sunday and then the take down on Sunday evening, please email Dan at the carvers email address: richmond.carvers@gmail.com with which times you can be available.

The website is now live and ready to take your entry information on your beautiful work as well as the prospectus: <https://www.richmondcarvers.com/>

Please share the show information on your social media pages, share it with friends and family, if you live in a complex perhaps you could put up one of the posters (speak to me and I can either email you a copy of the poster or print it out for you) or if you can think of any other way to get the information out there please let Becks know.

In other news Dan and Mike recently went to the Pacific Brant Woodwork and Art show and their carvings won several places, congratulations both!!!

Becks is asking for volunteers for the first demo at Britannia Shipyards on May 25th. Please let her know if you can be there. It is always nice meeting people and passing on knowledge to potential new club members.... It will also be another opportunity to highlight the upcoming show.

Please share the show information on your social media pages, share it with friends and family, if you live in a complex perhaps you could put up one of the posters (speak to me and I can either email you a copy of the poster or print it out for you).

Smiles

Daughter: Alexa, play Let It Go.

Dad: When I was your age, I had to call a radio station, wait on hold for 30 minutes to request a song, then sit by my boom box for an hour for my song to play with a blank cassette tape so I could record it.

Daughter: I don't understand any of that.

Time out for a Laugh

An Irishman walks into a bar in Dublin, orders three pints of Guinness, and takes a seat. He sips from each one in turn until they're gone, then comes back for another round.

The bartender, a bit puzzled, says, "You know, lad, a pint goes flat if you don't drink it fresh. It'd taste better if you ordered them one at a time."

The Irishman smiles and says, "Ah, but you see, I've got two brothers—one in America, one in Australia. When we all left home, we promised we'd drink this way to remember the good old days together. So I have one for each of me brothers, and one for meself."

The bartender nods, touched by the tradition, and lets it be. The Irishman becomes a regular, always drinking the same way.

Then one day, he walks in and orders only two pints. The bar falls silent. Everyone notices.

When he returns for another round, the bartender leans in and says gently, "I don't mean to intrude, but I just wanted to say—I'm sorry for your loss."

The Irishman looks confused for a second, then bursts out laughing. "Oh no, everybody's grand! It's just that my wife had us join that Baptist Church, so I had to quit drinking... but it hasn't affected me brothers though!"
